All right. That is the official, official welcome. We are so happy that you're all here. It's so much fun to see your names coming in in the chat and where you're calling in from. You're already doing what I was going to ask you to do, which is just tell us where you're calling in from. Also, if you feel like sharing a little bit about what drew you to this event, what you're hoping to get out of this event, we'd love to see that in the chat, too.

So it's great. Oh, hi. From Sweden. And Oklahoma. Maine. Massachusetts. Canada. Florida. Let's see. Norway. All right. Rhode Island. Santa Cruz. Amazing. It is so, so good to be here with you. Okay, I'm just. I'm getting all caught up on your names coming through the chat. You are here for our live panel event, Navigating change, Aligning with the stars to move from chaos to clarity. So please continue saying hello in the chat.

What I wanted to do was start with a little bit of a backstory, because the way we're doing this panel is a little bit different than the way that we've done panels in the past. So if you're new here, welcome. It's great to be with you, and I hope you love the next couple of hours with us. If you've been here a few times, I wanted you to kind of get some orientation for why we're doing things the way we're doing them.

So something happened probably about last summer. I noticed that we were starting to have the same conversation over and over and over on the podcast. All the astrologers were essentially saying the same thing, of course, differently from their different perspective and lens. But what they were saying is that we are in a time of unprecedented change, that this is a huge, historic threshold moment, that the configuration of transits that are happening in 2025, 2026, are so unusual that many have gone back thousands and thousands of years to see if this has ever happened again.

And the truth is, it hasn't. We are truly in a very new, different, unusual time. They were saying things like, this is both an end and a beginning. We will see change in our lifetime like we've never seen before, and we'll never see again, that nothing will be the same after the next couple of years. Things like the apprenticeship is over. This is no longer a time to be on the sidelines.

It's time to really jump in and live the life that you came here to live and contribute the gifts that you came here to contribute. So I was hearing these things over and over, and whenever this happens, I really pay attention. So this happened in 2019, on the verge of 2020. They were saying all the same things, and no one was, like, shying away from the strength with which they were saying things.

This is what started happening again this last summer, and it has continued. And so one of the most important things that they were emphasizing is that each and every one of us is at a major choice point for how we want to work with these energies, how we want to show up in this time. None of us can change the fact that these waves, these cosmic waves are here.

None of us can change it. But we can decide how we want to show up and surf these waves. Do we resist? Do we run away? Do we put our heads in the sand? Do we fight against the force of the universe? Do we get swept away by the waves? Do we let them swallow us up? Or do we get as informed as we can? Do we meet the waves with as much intentionality as.

As we can? Do we stay as calm, present, aware, and tuned in so we can pay attention to the cues, to our guidance, to our intuitive knowing? Do we drop into our hearts, trust ourselves, trust this moment, and navigate forward with focus and willingness, not perfection, but with intention and as much clarity as we can muster? So when what happened, is the question moved from what the heck is going on?

Because that was clear, to how do we navigate it? What are the opportunities? What mindset or qualities do we need to cultivate within ourselves to be able to meet this huge moment without burning ourselves out, losing hope, or getting overwhelmed by the intensity of it all? Essentially, how can we align with cosmic wisdom to move from chaos to. To clarity? And this, my friends, is why we are here right now.

And I'm guessing by the fact that you are here that you're interested in this level of conversation. And if you are, you're definitely in the right place. So while we are going to talk about the transits and the astrological signatures of what's going on and why, we need to focus on certain things. We're going to spend less time on the technicalities of the what and more time on the why and the how.

So to facilitate this type of conversation, we've organized the event a little differently than our usual panel events. First of all, I asked all five astrologers what qualities they feel are the most important for us to cultivate as we move into the future. We took all their answers, and we pared it down to seven that were the most emphasized and said kind of over and over, we're calling these the seven cosmic keys.

So this event is organized around these keys. So we're going to go through all seven, and for each key, we're going to start with the astrological transit that emphasizes this energetic signature. Then we're going to move into a discussion about what we can glean from the astrology on how to embody this quality or key. Now, because we're in a very new time, it's new for all of us, the astrologers, myself included.

I'd love for this to be less of the astrologers kind of on the mountain, telling us all what we need to know and more of a community dialogue, a meeting of our minds and our hearts. So please put your questions in the chat, put your thoughts, your reflections, anything you have to offer in the chat, and I'm going to do my best to weave your questions and your comments throughout the conversation.

Okay, now I have to ask, how many of you have downloaded your workbook? How many of you even know you have a workbook? It's okay if you don't. Laura on our team created the most beautiful workbook that you can use to take notes to. We have some journal prompts, we have some reflection, kind of like meditation, things that you can bring into your quiet time with yourself. But there definitely is a note section where you can put what the astrologers are saying about these transits in one spot.

So you can either print that out, you can fill it out electronically if you have the PDF conversion thing, or you can just refer to it later. You will have the recording to this event within 24 hours. So you can just sit back and relax. You'll be able to watch this over and over. We will get started here very soon. I know the astrologers are so excited to start talking to you, and you're excited to hear from them as well.

But one of the things I wanted to mention before we go any further is that all of the astrologers on this panel are also upcoming Inner Circle astrologers for our Inner Circle membership community. And this event kicks off our Equinox 50% off membership sale. So monthly, annual, or our new lifetime memberships are now 50% off. You can lock in this rate for as long as you stay a member.

If you love the teaching, if you love the conversation, if you love this kind of support, the Inner Circle is a place where we're doing this all the time. Every month, every lunar cycle, we are in this level of conversation with each other. We're in ceremony. We're learning astrology. We're asking questions, we're sharing. So this is the place for you. If you're interested. You can learn more@astrologyhub.com joinnow and if you do have questions about it, I will stay after this event to answer any of your questions.

Okay, just a couple more housekeeping notes. The event is two hours long. The recording will be available within 24 hours. We will email it to you. We will take one 5 minute break about halfway through. And you can hide the chat if you want. I know sometimes people get frustrated with the chat. There are ways to hide it. If you need to get instructions for that, we can put them in the chat.

But we were kind of thinking that maybe since everyone's getting really used to zoom, that you might know how to do it at this point. If not, then just let us know in the chat and we'll tell you how to hide the chat in the chat. Okay. All right. Finally, thank you for your generous gifts. Events like this take a huge team effort and we are so grateful to all of you who could contribute.

And I just want you to know that you that your contribution also enables the people who can't contribute right now. So a true community effort. Thank you so much. We're so grateful. So much goes into these events and it's just so great to receive from you as well what you feel the value is for yourself and also what you can contribute right now. So it's fantastic. Thank you for that.

Okay, the astrologers who are here today. All right, so we have our astrologers here. Gemini Brett, astronomy for astrologers expert. We have Kaelyn Castell, who's an alchemical astrologer. We have Ari Moshe Wolf, who is an evolutionary astrologer. Nura Rochelle, an integrative astrologer. And Natasha Alter, who is also an evolutionary astrologer and astrology Hub's fairy godmother. So for those of you who don't know the story, we've talked about it on the podcast quite a bit.

So these astrologers were very carefully selected because we felt like they could have this conversation with all of us at this very critical moment where people are feeling overwhelmed and maybe even just there's a lot of energy. And so we knew these astrologers are capable of holding this conversation, holding this dialogue, and holding this community. So welcome to all of you. I'm so happy that you're here. Thank you for joining us.

All right, and you can go ahead and unmute so we can kind of have more of a flow of conversation here. So we're going to start with the first cosmic key. And the first cosmic key is trust. I added just for us to include in the conversation the word surrender, because that one has felt really relevant as well. So trust and surrender. This idea of turning what feels like a breakdown into a breakthrough, trusting that breakdown, disillusionment process, trusting knowing that something else is happening at the same time.

Okay, so let's start the conversation with you, Brett, and what you're seeing in the astrology that is making you feel that trust and surrender. And this breakdown, breakthrough energy is something that we can really anchor on in this moment. Well, Pisces is an amazing place. Sweet seas to swim through. But it can also be very foggy and confusing and even maddening. And so we're coming out of a pretty long period of fog.

We. Neptune's been in Pisces since 2012, where many of us would feel Neptune belongs. But you can see at times of like in the lockdowns, Mercury was retrograde there. There's been Pisces problems on Earth, I feel, which has come through typically is like a collective confusion. Some of that I would even suggest, and maybe this is more Scorpio Joe than Gemini Brett, through a misdirection of our collective empathy.

And that can be just bewildering. You know, many of you have been lied to or gaslit in your life before, and your intuition was screaming something that the other person was saying is absolutely untrue. And some when sometimes we'll lose our intuitive touch and our intuitive gift when that happens, you know, also just feeling the weight of the world. You know, I like to see the Pisces waters as the rains that connect the waters of heaven and the waters of Earth.

You know, in that great cycle. I lived in Seattle 17 years, and rain can be depressing, too. You know, when we look around and we see all these changes that are happening that are very confusing, and we wonder if we're going to make it through, we have to keep the faith we are. And so, I mean, there's so much energy at the Pisces Aries cusp. I'm talking tropical zodiac.

Now, it's a very important point because that point is due east, not of California or Hawaii or Sweden, but of the center of the Earth, where we are all one. You know, we measure planets in the signs from the center of the Earth. So in a sense, our astrology's looking at our experience of Earth's experience of the heavenly happenings. And so this point that the Pisces Aries cusp as the east point of Earth, it's like the global ascendant.

You know, this is part of the mechanism of the turning of the ages. There's so much more to say. There's. But we have now Mercury, Venus in Aries retrograding back into Pisces. Neptune finally leaving Pisces into Aries and then heading back into Pisces. Saturn coming into Aries, heading back into Pisces. There's so much action at this place and, like, shapes and the dances of the planets over that point are just amazing.

But it's time for us, in a sense, to remember to keep the dream alive and to keep the faith and keep the poetry and keep the beauty of Pisces. But also, like, it's time to wake up. And sometimes that's what happens when strong Aries comes around. So I'm excited to see some of the global shifts, but I know for many it will feel tidal wave. But, you know, the surfers run to the beach at that time, and if we can go surf that wave instead of run away, I think this can be something of a great joy.

Brett, it's true that the surfers charged the beach at that time, and they don't do so without. They don't do so recklessly. They do that with respect of the intensity of the waves. Right? And they've, They've trained. They, they, they know, they know what the wave pattern is like. They know what the wind, you know, they're. They're tuned in. They're also trained and capable. And I think part of where we're at is trusting that we also have been being forged through the last however many years and knowing what our capabilities are, but also knowing when we're, when we don't have the capability to ride those waves, you know, when we need to just kind of retreat and take care and, you know, so it's.

It's a. It's a dance, right? It's a dance. Beautiful. Okay, anyone else want to jump in on what the astrology is telling us? Why trust and surrender and trusting this process of breakdown to break through is so important right now because I think that there can be the moment of like, well, well, maybe it's just a big, huge breakdown. How do we know that there's a breakthrough on the other side of this?

What is the astrology telling us in terms of. No, there is a breakthrough on the other side of this and how much of this is we're deciding whether or not there's a breakthrough on the other side of this. I have something that I think really speaks to that when I reflect on Pisces, the constellation, what we know about the glyph of the two fish swimming in different directions, how that does really invoke that everything everywhere, all at once kind of energy.

But it also, you know, with all of the overlay of the interpretation of Pisces, there's this massive letting go, but it's that continually coming back to, well, what keeps it all together. You know, they're tied together in their fins and that really begs the question of when everything goes, what is left? And that's how you know what was essential. So I think that speaks a lot to the mystery component of, well, we don't know everything, but there's always going to be those little threads that keep it together.

And I think we do know, like what are we waking up to? What are we dreaming about consistently, what whispers from our guides are continuing to come in. I think we just, we have to listen to those and really see them for what they are. I think they are those reminders that it's all going to be okay, probably way better, you know, in a lot of ways. Natasha, following up on what Brett mentioned regarding our intuition have been played with a lot in the, let's say last several years and empathy, our human empathy have been misdirected and also abused in so many ways.

Saturn coming to Pisces, conjoining Neptune also reminds us that our intuition, even though we didn't follow it at that time or this time or 20 years ago when our, our, our heart told us don't do that. And we did all of that retroactively. So that transit of Saturn, Neptune and Pisces now at its closing phase also can discipline us and mobilize us to commit to cultivate and trust our intuition more and more.

You see, we are, if we have wherever we have not been following is being reminded right now to a lot of people. A lot of people are receiving information or awareness that what they intuitively had a hunch on but followed, let's say the consensus was actually the right awareness and the right download. So yeah, the beautiful side of this closing final degrees of Saturn, Neptune, Pisces is to download and embody, step into the embodiment of listening to our inner attunement and learning to honor it.

Saturn cultivated through discipline and practice. Saturn and yeah, make it a part of our daily reality more and more because we will need it in the Times that are coming that might be seemingly chaotic with a lot of breaking of the old structures and rules. This is this, this inner guidance will be that voice that will lead us to the truth of our embodiment and our very, very mission here on this planet.

Yeah, I want to speak a little more to that. Just in this path of disciplining our intuitive connection. I think there's also this, this necessary phase of massive confusion where it might feel very difficult right now to even know how to discern what is true. And especially with just considered Jupiter in Gemini, right perspectives and lots of information moving to squirrel that Pisces, confusion seems to be a necessary part of the process.

And I think this is where can feel like what is true. How do I know what to believe or what perspective or what angle do I adopt? And I think the, the deepest teaching of confusion, if we want to see it as a teaching or if you want to see confusion confusion as offering its own medicine, it says that because there is confusion, there must be something called not confusion.

There must be a state of clarity that derivatively exists. Otherwise if there was nothing other than confusion, then the answer to confusion would be more dualistic thinking would be, oh, I got to find the right perspective or the right answer or logically piece together my reality in the right way to overcome the confusion. But that just leads to more confusion. So I think there's a real, a necessity to sort of face the limits of the meaning that we've made in our life where we're trying to find this is the truth or this is what I'm supposed to believe, this is the right perspective, this is what I'm going to give my faith to.

This is what I'm going to give my devotion to. So much of what we've given our meaning to ends up being totally meaningless, right? And that can be utterly devastating. It can induce an immense amount of confusion. And you know, one not so well known quality of Pisces is sadism, right? Where we can actually feel so angry, deeply rageful at God, at reality, because our expectations of where we placed meaning end up not being fulfilled.

And instead of recognizing maybe I've displaced meaning onto an illusion, we then direct that anger towards reality itself. And we kind of become cold, we become numb, we lose that empathy, we lose that caring, like naively expecting that if we're going to help other people or be kind, that they'll. So there's something deep in this and several of us have mentioned faith and trust, that this journey of faith and trust actually really Means no condition.

Like, we're not, we're not having faith that there's a condition or a perfection or a particular state that's going to arrive in a way that we're imagining it. It's like that sentence that we've, we've heard before. The Holy Spirit, the ego says, meet these conditions and then I'll find peace, whereas the spirit says, I'm going to find peace now, unconditionally. I think that's like the deeper spiritual evolution.

And Natasha, you mentioned this discipline. It's like Saturn, Neptune being the spiritual maturation to really cultivate and strengthen our choice, our alignment in peace and love and trust with no condition. I don't understand. There's more that I haven't seen. There's so much to learn. But I'm going to cultivate my alignment and trust that there's a thing called truth. But if I try to possess it right and fit it into my framework, I'm going to get myself confused again.

So you can think this is like just a big letting go and learning time for us in that way. Wow. That idea of trying to possess it and trying to place conditions, it's. That's going to lead to more of a sense of confusion. It's, it's, it's a great clue for us if we're feeling confused. Perhaps we have placed conditions on, on. On the outcomes. Like, we will have faith if we see these certain things appear.

We will, you know, we will, we will surrender if it's going in our way, if it's going the way we want it to go, you know, all these things that we, we do. Wow. Yeah. Caitlin, do you want to. Quickly then I want to hear, if you don't mind. Yes. I'm confused, therefore I must have been mistaken. Right. Full frame. That is good. That is helpful. I'm confused, so I must have been mistaken, but not mistaken.

I mean, can you just caveat that a little bit? Like, mistaken in what way? I created meaning where there is none. Not mistaken in, like, I'm a sinner, I've got it wrong, or God punished me. But mistaken is. I must have believed a thought that isn't true, and I'm open to correction. And I'm not going to try to be my best teacher. I'm not going to try to control my education.

That got me here. Yeah. Yeah. Amazing. Okay. Caitlin, there was a comment from the community that I thought would be really good, and I actually think you might want to respond to it. So I'm going to weave IT in, and you can either respond to it, or we can, or you can say what you'd like to say. But Chris is talking about technology. And Chris said, for me personally, tech interferes with my intuition.

I have to take time away from it. So. So the question is, do you all see that technology interferes with our tuition or can it be utilized to develop intuition? I'm not sure I'm qualified to answer this, but I find that tech can often add to my intuition. I mean, things will come across my screen. Like this morning, something happened that I saw, like an article I saw that was like, oh, my gosh, that's so perfect.

And it was something that I was intuiting and it was a confirmation. So I think it's all in how we look at it. And a lot of it has to do with perception, of course, and also what we're feeling. Of course, Pisces is very much about the feeling realm. And a couple of things I just want to say is we need to give ourselves permission to feel what we feel.

If we're angry, we're hurt, we're scared, we're terrified, we need to give ourselves permission to feel those feelings so we can transmute and transform them, because otherwise we're suppressing, repressing, and denying them. And that's not helpful. They just continue to run under the surface. Surface. And. And so that's part of the surrender piece too. It's like, okay, I'm just confused. Love that word. I'm confused. I don't know.

I'm. I'm scared. I don't know what's going on. So. So we try to avoid that and maybe distract ourselves with tech. So, so then how do we give ourselves permission to stay more present to what we're feeling and also to recognize that there's things we don't have control over and there's nothing we can do about it. So that's maybe not a good place to put our focus. There are things we do have control over, what we're choosing to do.

And that's the place, maybe that is what would be good for us to put our attention on, is what we can control. We can meditate, we can pray, we can do ceremony, we can have conversations with friends, we can rage if we need to. We can do whatever we need to do for ourselves at this time to feel what we feel. And because we've lived in a culture that hasn't really supported that, this is the time for us to.

To. To just give ourselves permission to do that. And it can change everything. And so a very. I'm going to wrap this up by saying one of my favorite mantras that I've had for many years is accept what is. Because there's things that you can't change and do anything of that and trust the universe. Trust that it's all going, is working for you in some way that maybe you can't perceive or conceive of right now at this time.

Beautiful. One final question on this key. Why do you trust the universe? I have to say, in my life over time, there's not always times I've trusted and I've been absolutely terrified and gone through a lot of hard things, but it's always worked out for the best for me. So now I have developed trust. And, and if we can understand that, that it's always happening for us in some way that we don't necessarily get in the moment, I think it helps us to develop that.

That sense of trust and, and, and just knowing that somehow this is all meant for our evolution in ways that we can't imagine yet. And, and that's okay. We don't have to know. And in fact, certainty and knowing. I love this. Because confusion can be a good thing. Allows us to be more open to possibilities. If we're in certainty and knowing, we, we think we have it figured out where, then we're on that path and we're.

And it's like Ari was saying, we're. We're not listening. We're not paying attention to the possibility that maybe that's not even the right thing to be thinking about or the best thing to be thinking about or committed to. So how do we allow ourselves to be in the not knowing and in the uncertainty and, and trust and just keep coming back to that place of, okay, this is happening in the best ways possible.

Just trust the universe can. Is. Is got it in hand and we don't have to know everything. I love that. Okay. I also love that people are putting why they trust the universe in the chat. So this is. Yahavah says, because it's your source of life. Rosalind says that she has experience of the universe for over 80 years. Ann says, think about the alternative to not trusting. Let's see.

The serenity prayer is coming up. A prayer of St. Francis is coming up. Donna says, because we are here. Eva says, I learned to, to trust life by seeing the red thread, looking back and realizing that I could never have figured it out beforehand. Yeah. Patty says a mentor said once that not knowing is one of the most Powerful places to be in the universe. Everything is possible.

Yes. Okay. When to me, the universe is what physically holds me. Okay. Beautiful. Thank you. Okay. Brett, do you do. Is this on trust surrender? We want to go to the next key, and we can weave in. I just want to add that trust in the universe and trust in your intuition might be the exact same thing. And what happens when we don't trust our intuition? And how many times do we have to learn to listen to that voice?

Right? Because sometimes we'll delay a change or whatever, and then we look back and say, what if I just did it when I knew I should have? And everything's happening for a reason. And. But sometimes the reason is so that we can learn. Right. Okay, beautiful. Yes, of course. So the question arises, trusting the universe, sounds like there is me, and then there is that thing called universe.

So in itself, that question is already fragmenting the self from the whole, which is also. We just talk about illusions. That's another illusion that we have a chance to transcend with the. With the beautiful energies that are available to us. You know, trust the universe is like, do you trust that you exist? Do you actually trust that? Do you trust that you have that? I'm speaking to you now.

See what I mean? It's like we're playing with. We've got to be careful with our. With the. With our phrasings and our words, because we might be unconsciously creating constructs that are disorienting kind of in its foundation. Very true. Very true. And. And it's across all spectrums of life. I feel we're being able to see even the illusions in our language, in our. In just the. The perception that we have.

So thank you for pointing that one out. That's a powerful one. Okay, Amazing. Let's go to the second cosmic key, which we have called expand. Now to broaden that. That means expand your perspective. Hold the power of both and. And more. So I can't tell you how many times I've heard astrologers talk about this point that we are moving from. I'm right, you're wrong. This is true. That's untrue.

This is the way it is. Your way is not right or correct. And we're being asked to expand our perception and our awareness to hold all of it. To hold all of it. And so I wanted to start here with what you're seeing in the astrology, because, again, this has been so consistent. This drum has been so consistently beat over the last few months. What in the astrology is pointing you in that direction that we need to be able to hold both and more.

So I'll just say one of the things I've noticed over many years is that what we put our attention on. So if we're looking at the astrology in a certain way, then. And that's what our focus is, that's how we're going to experience it. And if we're. And one of the things I love about doing roundtables like this or panels like this is that we get all these different perspectives that help us to see there's more to it than maybe just one way of looking at it.

And if we look at how this Pisces to Aries, Aries to Pisces, and this equinox time, the sun, as Brett was saying, rising due east to due west, and it's lowering the magnetic field of the Earth, so it gives us access to greater realms and dimensions. And ancient cultures knew this and that's why they did equinox ceremonies and they built these sacred sites to let them know when that was happening.

And, and they were tuning in and getting connection to this possibility of what's happening at this time. And, and it just so also happens that currently, as the sun is rising at the equinox, galactic centers overhead and galactic centers beaming down on Earth, and it increases our intuitive skills, increases our intuitive abilities. And so we have this opportunity at this time to recognize that there is so much more going on than what maybe we've ever thought of before.

There's so much more happening. And we're at ends and we're at beginnings and in that between point, that's where the greatest alchemy can happen, when we're at the end of something and the beginning of something new. The alchemy takes place in that between point. And that's the opportunity that we have at this time with all that's going on, especially at this equinox. I can share. So, you know, we have, as a part of this larger theme, Uranus moving to enter Gemini.

Jupiter also, as I mentioned, being really active right now in Gemini. When we think about information and, and media and all the different perspectives and opinions. I mean, I'll restate. It's. I can't, I can't overstate that. There is massive confusion in terms of facts and data and what's true, what's not true. But let's just take a moment and think about, like, what, what is information, right? Like there's a lot of information out there, a lot.

And the information of existence all of it will be extracted through the. The key that opens the door of our mind, right. Our unique lens of interest and curiosity and openness to learn. Which means a part of what we're facing right now is the calling for a greater openness and a willingness to ask questions and sincerely become interested to learn something new as opposed to hearing the same thoughts and re establishing the same logical premises.

And there needs to be some level of agency in, in our choice to learn, in our engagement with. I want to know more about this because otherwise we're just going to be bombarded with the media and the content that life will offer us to consume all over the place, right? So there's always going to be with Uranus, a threshold of. Especially with Gemini, the mainstream thread of data and information and narratives, right?

Like facts are created not in the purest objective way. They're more so a selected cherry picking of perspectives that we weave together to create a story. So one person's narrative, which is so dependent on their experience and their state of consciousness and on a deeper level, their psychology, what they really want to see is going to weave a particular story. And unless we're asking questions like, okay, heard that story, but there is a character in your story.

What, what's their name? What was it like for them? I don't know. Where do they live? What's their email? So I'm going to share, you know, and I got consent from this individual. I just met a woman who lives in the West Bank. She's a part of an evolutionary astrology study group that Michelle, my partner, is sort of administrating. And when I heard it, I'm like, oh, cool it.

Probably a Jew in the West Bank. Not so uncommon. And then I looked at her name and she's clearly Palestinian. She lives in Ramallah and she's studying evolutionary astrology. So already the, the existing mental framework in my mind just blew open. An Arab in Ramallah studying not just astrology, but the outlier evolutionary astrology. Right? I need to meet this person. I'm a Jew and I've lived in Israel.

I want to meet because already there's a. There's a humanity. And thus my mind is seeing a context for a reality that I didn't even know existed. And it's been so healing and important and meaningful for me to be interacting with her. I've been reading her blog. This just happened like three days ago. And this is a part of Uranus and Gemini. It's not just like abstract information, it's humanity that every Narrative, and every factual realm of experience is defined by the people gathering that information.

And it was spoken before how there could be a lack of empathy and just utter confusion. It's so easy, and it eludes us. I invite this to be a point of sincere contemplation for every one of us. It's so easy to live in the bubble of our perspectives and information and ingles and to just sort of build the framework. Logical frameworks can be built that are sensible, but they just sort of exclude entire realms of experience and perspective and thus entire dimensions of humanity.

Because I'm right, and this makes sense. And we may not even realize how we're closing our heart or shutting ourselves off and closing our minds. So I think this is both, you know, on the one hand, destabilizing, because reality is like, there's so much more. And. And our ego defenses don't want to break that because we've built it. Uranus is shattering that. So on the other hand, this can be incredibly exciting if we're truly willing to learn more about reality and each other and our frame of understanding this world.

It's like. It's. It's like reading. Reading a book, putting that book down and then going on an airplane and like, visiting the place that the book was about, and suddenly it's like, whoa, this is nothing. That. What I thought. You know, the entire frame, it gets to open up in a. In a way we can't imagine. That's, I think, a big part of what's happening now. Opening the frame in a way we can't even imagine.

I love it. Nora, I know you're having a recent experience and our podcast episode that we recorded about your new expansion of being able to hold multiple things probably most people haven't seen yet because it just got released. So this can happen within the microcosm of our study of astrology. Right? And we've all seen it. This house system is right. No, this house system is right. This zodiac is right.

This one's right. And. And then we've also experienced when a new piece of information comes in, and we thought one thing about ourself, but now when you put it in a different system, you kind of have to think about yourself differently, and that can be really disorienting, confusing. Often it's just like, I don't want to do that. I don't want to go there, because that just confuses who.

My idea of myself or my idea of what I thought was right because someone told me that. Or that's what I learned or whatever. So, Nura, can you tell us about your experience after over a decade in Western astrology, kind of opening yourself up to the lens of Vedic astrology and what that has, first of all, the process of disorientation, but then also what it's opened up for you in terms of possibilities.

It's one of those really fun things that I almost can't not look at the astrology to establish how I even got to the mindset to be ready for that. It means so much. Pisces and everything we've been talking about of that complete ego, death and disillusionment of who I thought that I was, I really did go through, and I think I'm still going through it. This process of like, I don't actually fully know who I am, but at the same time, how freeing is that?

And that allowed me, I think, the space and the grace to explore from a different angle. You know, after following those continual intuitive nudges, that there's something else I need to look at. I don't know why I just need to look at it from this way. I've looked at it this way long enough that I've gleaned what I can in this moment from that perspective. I had to look elsewhere and within everything that everyone has spoken to.

And you, you spoke to it in such a beautiful way too, Ari, that I. There's such an identity with rightness that is founded upon such profound human wounds of punishment when we're wrong, that is present through like different factions of religion as astrologers, witches, wise people. There's such a, a fear of being wrong that we tend to like, flock together in like little groups of like, rightness. And then we find safety there.

We're like, well, all of these different people. That's why we in academia, it's it being peer reviewed. It's like all these other people agree with me. So this is what makes it right. And then you're afraid to disagree or you're afraid to look at it from a different place because that's going to mean isolation and aloneness. And I think that's what we fear as social beings more than anything.

So I think it takes a lot of bravery to explore outside the box. I also think that it speaks to this other phenomena that's happening around the world. You know, this a factor of globalization, like maybe hundreds of years ago. And we didn't have technology and we didn't have access to learning about other cultures and other worldviews. We really did think of this other as potentially trying to invade us and hurt us, you know, it all kind of comes back to that, like, protection in a way.

But now we have this possibility of. Of growing and learning about people. But I don't think that our nervous systems, you know, we evolve faster with technology than our bodies evolve, if that makes sense. Like, more has happened that we're still processing. We're like, oh my gosh, there's all these different ways of being and living that we have not yet fully processed that. And I think it takes work, you know, that's.

I think the work of learning about other cultures, the work of allyship. I mean, there's so many different routes to go down with that conversation. But I think to give ourselves a little bit of grace in that I am safe to not be right, I. I am safe to like, drop that mantle. Because what it actually suggests, if I let go of that need to be some. Like, I have all the answers.

And this is the only way to look at it. I think we actually get more in touch with our humanity and something else is allowed to occur. A different kind of alchemy, which is what ultimately creates that expansion. It's like when I let go of that identity of rightness, I surrender and I acknowledge that. That's when I expand. And I think it. It touches on one of the questions that you asked earlier, which I loved your reframe on that too, Natasha, about the, The.

The connection, like, we are one with the universe. But it's kind of like I trust the universe for the same reasons that I practice gratitude. Like, it's. It's also about the frequency that it puts me in. Like, I'm in a frequency of trust. I'm in a frequency of trust with myself. I'm in a frequency of gratitude with myself. And. And I can choose that too. When it comes to looking at things from a different perspective.

I can choose to be open, and that feels better. I had this conversation with my daughter, who's nine, who's like, still not loving, like, different vegetables and things like that. And she asked me, she's like, why do you, like, love all these salads and different foods? And I just think I have a better experience. The more that I love, like, the more music I love, oh, there's more for me to enjoy, the more food that I love, more for me to enjoy.

Maybe that's the Jupiter and Taurus in me that stays the same in Vedic and Western astrology. So it's like you look for the double signatures more to enjoy. You look from these different perspectives, more ways to enjoy myself, more ways to look at myself and express myself, too. And so that's. There's so much more to say about this, but I think that's really the bottom line for me.

Brett. Well, I think it's pretty easy to expand perspective, especially now. You know, part of the Gemini piece can really bring us into duality and polarity, and the promotion of polarity on the TV screens and otherwise at this time is just out of control. Nobody can disagree with that. But if you find somebody you disagree with, try to understand their point of view. I mean, can you walk across the street to that house that flew a different colored banner than the one that you support and like a neighbor, just say hello and share heart and then maybe ask and try not to judge and just hear, because the, the amount of assumptions that we make, right, about why anybody's making some choice that we believe to be wrong won't help us connect and will keep us disconnected and is only going to snowball into an avalanche, you know, that we won't survive.

So really opening our hearts and releasing this idea that we're supposed to bring people to the light, but rather do what we can to see the light in them, release the idea that we're meant to bring people to the light and instead see the light in them. I love that. Brett. Wow. We need to put that all over. You know, one thing I've noticed, even on, on social media is people will say things like, I will never understand why.

And then they'll have their, you know, I will never understand why this whole group of people sees this this way or why. And I'm like, that is like a question, but not a question. That is open but not open. That. That's like, I will literally never understand. You're basically saying, I never want to cross the aisle. I never want to see it from your perspective. I never want to understand how.

I don't want to see the light in those other people because I will never understand them. It's like, that's a big statement, you know, and it just, it's so closed and it's the opposite of what we're talking about. So just, just pay attention. Even, even, you know, if you're seeing things like that, just, it's just a notice of, like, wow, you know, how does that make that person feel that they're, like, pointing the finger at, you know, Natasha, I, I think you were going to say something earlier.

Yes. It's all in the same vein with the energies upcoming Energies and already existing with Pluto in Aquarius, with Uranus coming to Gemini, with a lot of Aries coming up, the era of all dogmas or dogmatic thinking in general will be dismantling itself. So anybody who is used to live in this seat of self righteousness, and I see a lot of self righteousness now, as you mentioned social media, it's like the more the energy is pulling apart and kind of dissolving, the more people try to keep on some people, not everybody, to their past truth or encrusted kind of truth, almost fearing that it's being questioned.

So we will see this polarization, but at the same time it's happening right before the new kind of modality of human interaction will be taking place, which is not going to be based on belief systems or dogmas. There will be new categories, new bridges that are going to unite people above and besides their belief system or political affiliations. You know, so this is the coming era, is the era of the.

It's the end of all dogmas, whether it's religious, whether it's political, ideological, whatever your focus of beliefs are, is on, you know, that is going to be completely restructured and we're going to be meeting on a whole new vibrational level and the heart is going to be playing a huge role there. So as Brett say, can you love them? So hopefully that is going to be the bridge bringing cohesiveness above the ideologies and dogmas in the future.

And we need to start practicing that of course with the Pisces 29 degrees. Would you also say that kind of this like I'm going back to something that Brett said here too in terms of feeling like you need to show people the light or show people the truth or show. It's kind of like that savior complex, right? Like I'm here to save this person from their misguided belief, from their misguided actions.

You know, whatever the, whatever the thing is, we feel like we have to save people from. Would you say that that is part of this disillusionment as well? That we're not here to essentially save someone from themselves? I think saving some or trying to convince somebody or change somebody forcefully, somebody's opinion is also fear based because ultimately we're afraid of being wrong. As who was it Noura said that there is that ancient archaic fear of being wrong and punished for that.

So part of that push to try to change somebody else's opposite view is actually pretty self oriented and almost narcissistic, you know, so yeah, that can Be the savior and the self righteous one together fighting for their, for their survival. Basically, I just want to say that the shadow side of Pisces, one of the shadow sides of Pisces is the desire to change it, fix it or make it be different instead of allowing it to be what it is.

So that's one of the challenges that we often have. And I know as a Pisces sun, I have done that and I am getting over it. Very good. Okay. Any other final Donna Marie says, is that ego driven? And then Pamela is saying, Natasha, what ingress indicates to you the end of all dogma? Everything. Everything. All the pictures say end of dogma. Ingresses was the question. What ingresses?

Yeah, yeah. Well, what I gu, you know, what, what transits, what astrological placements? Everything. Pluto entering Aquarius, you're almost moving towards Gemini, you know, Neptune moving towards Aries. They're all dancing together in sextile and Trines. Plus the upcoming, you know, age we're moving into the Aquarian age. Plus the whatever other subtle metaphysical physical changes that are going planetarily and maybe galactically, which I'm not an expert on, but they are happening.

So all of this together, plus just like a download, like we feel it, right? Don't you? We feel that. Oops. And we're seeing it. Oh my God, that was true for millions of people. Now all of a sudden it's being put out of question or disclose that it was a lie. For example, Uranus and Gemini will bring a lot of disclosure, unpleasant such and a lot of information that's going to be shocking and it is going to accelerate the downfall of old thought forms and attachment to all dogmas.

Do you all feel so, so it's, it's. I love what Nora brought in about this, you know, needing to be right and how, how insecure it makes us feel when we're wrong. Maybe subconsciously because it's like an actual survival sort of. Oh God, if I'm wrong I'm going to be burned at the stake, for example. Or, you know, why else do you feel it's so hard for us to do this thing of holding both and what makes that so hard?

Like it seems so simple. Like why can't we just acknowledge that there's other perspectives and be good with that and move on? Because tribalism and clan is in our survival, you know, history and DNA. And also we're very much being steered in through divide and conquer tactics and not just on the mainstream media, it's everywhere, you know, so, you know, when you're called to pray for somebody, right?

It's an interesting thing to look at. I connected with a client the other day whose mother is praying for her in church in a small town. And so now everybody knows everything about her. And of course, her mother is coming from a place of wanting to save her, but she doesn't need to be saved, only in that person's opinion, Right? And of course, family is one thing, but I don't know.

I mean, I spent a lot of time trying to resist the idea of, like, wanting to burn down the patriarchy, which is this, like, false tyrant, and just see it instead as this sobbing boy child who hasn't been loved. And now it's like a very. Like a rookie parent, right? Like, our baby just turned nine months old of, like, learning not to take things so personally and learning to try to feel into, oh, why is she sad?

Why is she angry? Why is she scared? Right? So, like, how can I offer love? Like, you know, I don't want to pray to make my crying baby better. I want to try to understand her and have consideration and compassion, you know, which is the. The most important of these Pisces words. I think it's kind of unprecedented that there's probably not one person here that can identify a close friend or a family member that shares a completely different frame or paradigm than yourself.

It's so rampant, and I think there's a widespread fear of cancellation. And a friend of mine posted something like, your life hasn't really begun until you've been canceled. And I wouldn't. I wouldn't agree. But what I take from that is perhaps your life hasn't begun until you've overcome that fear. I think what keeps us. I posted something about how taboo it is to express empathy for the other side because that somehow means you're in, you know?

And so I shared this thought on Facebook, and this one person very humbly wrote, ari, I'm so glad you wrote this. I've been following your teachings for a while, but for. For a long time, I. I haven't allowed myself to watch or read anything that you've. That you've put out there because I've been so afraid that you would end up revealing that you're not the compassionate, inclusive person that I want to believe you are.

I didn't want to hear you speak about Palestinians and find out that you're just like everyone else. And so it's like there's so much fear, not just of expressing ourselves, but, you know, actually hearing what another person might say and how it might shatter where we want them to be. And. And that she wouldn't feel comfortable talking or having a conversation with me because the possibility of me being somewhere else and then she'll feel really sad.

You know, there's so much intricacy woven in that in all of our relationships right now. It's. It's pretty profound how deep this is. It is deep. I think just recognizing that and this is what we're going to get to later. But the compassion for ourselves as we're navigating the sea of a lotness is a lot. Okay, man. We could do a two hour panel on each cosmic key.

I'm seeing that now. Okay. There is a question from the community. Pamela is saying. I also wonder if there is a confusion between a opinions and facts. Facts evidenced based facts is fact. The bones of the story. However, opinions are your own. We are all entitled to our own opinions. What do you think about that? I've seen a lot of facts lately that are definitely opinions. Right? They're just the opinions of the people I'm supposed to believe because they have some letters after their name or something like that.

So on one level I definitely agree. That's the Sagittarius side of the axis truth with the capital T. But the Gemini side knows that there are as many truths as there are minds. And it not one. One side's not right, one side's not wrong. Hot and cold aren't right and wrong. You know, there are two sides of a spectrum and we want to find the middle way. So I wonder if I really agree with that.

But I also feel like to me that's the kind of consciousness or, I don't know, mentality that's in a way kind of been weaponized to really divide us and to take us away from our intuition. Because I might be feeling this thing, but I'm told it's wrong because this is right, you know, but I can just literally like change the web page and that's wrong and this is right.

And this has been. You know, how when in our lives did we hear misinformation, disinformation, mal information, right? Like those words, they didn't really exist and like the palette that I saw seven years ago and it's hard to make it through a day without hearing one of those words used in such a strong way to completely demonize a person or a group or to, you know, make another a saint.

So part of my like very biased and triggered response, I just like, I. I really feel this Sway of. I don't know, like a rejection response sometimes to. There are facts and there are opinions. So again, I like. I really mean, please pardon me. I don't mean especially to. To react like volatile to anybody's wisdom or comments here. And I think it's a really important truth that you shared, but I also have some resistance and some issues with it, as you can hear.

Donna Marie says there is one, in my opinion, fact change happens, especially if you do everything you can to resist it. Yeah. Okay. All right, let's go to the third cosmic key. And that is this idea of community and we rise together. So things like the power of the people also sort of selecting supportive communities for our evolution and growth, these kinds of ideas. So I'd love to hear what in the astrology is showing us that community is highly emphasized.

The power of the people. It's highly emphasized. And how do we use that awareness to help guide us? So, Nura, do you want to start this one off? Sure. So there are a few fascinating transits when we looked at from the Vedic perspective. So March 29, we have Saturn not only, you know, involved with the eclipse that's coming up, but also shifting into sidereal Pisces. So we've been talking about all the Pisces, but from the Vedic perspective, it hasn't even started yet, other than what we've been doing with Rahu, the North node, which all of it is, I think, fully still accurate.

Every single thing that we've been talking about, it's just again, looking at it from that different perspective. Another element of that is the nodal axis. So where all of the planets move in, you know, the regular direction in the Vedic system, they're all kind of entering a sign later. You know, in the case of Saturn, like two and a half years later or Jupiter a year later. But the nodes, they go into a sign first, they go into a sign before.

So Rahu and Ketu, the north and south node, will be entering sidereal Aquarius and Leo in May of this year. And that is really bringing up a lot of, you know, what we can imagine with new technology, new discovery inventions. And then, of course, I think that major emphasis on the Aquarian energy of community, power to the people, but also all the shadow and all of the potential illusion that I think we've already been speaking a lot to is that, you know, when you're in communities, sometimes there can.

There's a really beautiful expression of community, but there is also an underbelly of community. There's also an Illusion, right? I think if we are just honest and realize, like, well, what I. Why do I want to be part of this community? Or why do I want to be validated by this community? That's bringing up the LEO side of the dynamic. With Aquarius, you know, we're seeking that personal, individual validation from the group.

So it feels really important to acknowledge that we're going to really be working with this energy of a lot of different opinions. I think we're already on the money with the conversation. And the evolution of community, I think, brings in the evolution of how we talk to each other. We're still in that navigation, not needing to subscribe to groupthink in order to belong. Like, we don't have to all think the same thing in order to belong.

And I think there's like some massive decoupling that gets to happen. It's like, I know when you think, oh, these groups that I want to be a part of, it's because we, we are think alike, you know, we have similar opinions, you know, and that can feel really lovely and really validating. But what if we also were talking to people that didn't have the same opinion? I mean, family is one of those really fun ways where that gets to happen, but a lot of times we feel forced to do that and might even avoid that.

But what if we, you know, chose communities that had the intention of just being who you are and it not really not needing to be about agreement. Another element of that that I think causes difficulty. And this is something that I've seen a lot. It's like the need to choose a side. It's like that idea, if you don't stand for something, you'll fall for anything. And I think that's like the argument that a lot of that you'll see almost like posited against a lot of our.

What we've been talking about, of, you know, staying open and questioning. It's like, well, that means you're just gonna be wishy washy, you're gonna be flaky. Like, we can't trust anything that you're saying because you just change your mind. You know, like, that's a very real point here. And I would love to challenge that, you know, because I, I do think there is that central elements of, you know, there's always a caveat.

Like, okay, I might not feel like I can say I stand on one side of the fence or the other, but there are certain threads that will always be there. Like, I, I stand for letting everybody have a voice I, I stand for living from the heart. Like there, there are more kind of blanket general underlying principles that can be applied to every situation. And so I think that we'll be learning a little bit more about that, maturing with that, especially with Saturn being conjunct the north node.

It's like Saturn wants to bring discipline to all of this part of ourselves that wants to grow and expand in our communities and expand what we are creating together. And I think Saturn will kind of help us to be maybe take it a little bit slower, maybe not jumping to conclusions so quickly, like allowing things to marinate a little bit more before we feel like we have to have it all figured out.

Anybody else want to speak to this community idea and some of these, these things that, I mean, because we've been talking about the importance of expanding and holding both and, and so Nura, you just brought in some great points. And when we're building communities, then what are the unifying factors? If it's not our opinions or our political views or, you know, if it's, if it's something more eternal and timeless, is that even important?

I mean, what are the important elements for community, I guess is what I'm asking. Yeah, that's as individual to the community as you are to you. Right. And I mean, I think a lot of this is about fully being ourselves, you know, as we say, letting our free flag flies, like showing who we truly are. And then we bring our people to us. Not community is not being around people who won't let you be you.

And I think everybody called to strange studies like astrology knows that one super well. And there's a difference between family and community or family and soul family or family and tribe in that way. Also, also, you know, I think we all, because we've been called to kind of a love for outsider information at least approach whatever we want to call it. There's a hermetic stage that happens, but fellowship is super important, you know, and if the rules of the game are good, this is always how I teach Capricorn to Aquarius, which traditionally we know are Saturnian things.

If the rules of the game are good, then Aquarius innovates because Capricorn is many things, but it is the rules of the game, right? So if you look at chess like that's a great game, but chessers know this whole world of all different opening moves and closing moves and know when like this thing's going to end in 18 moves and it's a stand, whatever, like I can't even speak that language, right?

But like that structure itself, there's been so much innovation. It's become this whole world upon worlds upon worlds upon worlds. And people in that kind of community know, right. Well, the rules of the game are broken. And breaking broken rules is the right thing to do. And sometimes it's like the act of resisting, rebelling, or moving just away from an outside of a place that doesn't fit, where you just find a bunch of other people did too, and you're like, oh, hey, I'm like you.

But I think those questions of what makes community, what matters most in the community, those are the questions, but there's no answers to them. Right. Because they should be as specific to a community as, you know, your fingerprint is to you. And I think having some fluidity as well. There's so much happening in the comments section, by the way, so much beautiful wisdom in this community. But one of the things I read earlier that was fun is like, hey, my neighbors are like, not like us at all, but if things really go down, like, they'll have our back.

Do you know what I mean? And sometimes it's like that, right? It's like the way that we gather in response to crisis. I mean, sadly, that's been the case for so many people. In areas that are experiencing devastation, whether through warfare, natural disaster or whatever, we really see that kind of response. And we're all in a disaster, right? I mean, if we open our eyes to this tidal wave, and people who are willing to see it rather than look away are probably people that you want to spend your time with, you know?

So I'll just say one more thing about this is kind of the Pluto and Aquarius, this piece in the community. At my school, I recently asked, I don't know, like, we were talking about power to the people as this Pluto and Aquarius symbol, right? If Pluto is one of the beings that speaks for power in Aquarius, the people, then is this power to the people? And I like, well, who wouldn't want that?

And I wish I could say who share this beautiful truth, but it was like, oh, the people wouldn't. And I just hadn't even considered it, you know, I mean, I've heard this thing that people want to be led and people fear freedom and those kinds of things. And I can see that in me. Yeah, right. But it was really just the most profound thing that I'm still stumbling on as I get out and walk in the woods.

Yes, yes. Where. Where is it nice to sort of just not take responsibility and Kind of let someone else handle everything and, and then be able to blame that person or that organization when things don't go right because you didn't, you didn't make it, you didn't participate in it. So there is definitely a benefit to not having the power in that way. Yeah. When the floods were happening and I mean the hurricanes in the southeast and I was talking with a friend who, you know, lost everything in Tennessee shortly after, I was just really feeling the weight of that conversation and how people weren't receiving help.

The fire broke out on the hill over here in like serious smoke. And then the plane came and dropped the red stuff, you know, and put it out and then all the trucks. It was like an all night affair, but it's totally gone. I actually haven't walked over there to check it out yet. And it's, it's a distance from me, but it's like, wow, man, I'm so happy that there are like fire people with fire planes and fire truck because I would have no chance, you know, I mean, I couldn't outrun those flames fast enough.

And so I, I think there's this in part of your statement, Amanda, I also heard like, well, we need to take all the responsibility onto ourselves. I'm not saying you're suggesting that. Right. But it's okay to put the responsibility for this piece in that place of the community. Like that's what builds community. Right. It's like we all have different superpowers, we all have different interests, we all have different passions, we all have different things that we're like, have no interest in.

Yeah. And we come together and form kind of a complete unit. You know what I mean? And so in that kind of opposites attraction, there's something in like, I don't know, it takes all the pieces to make the Voltron or. I'm dating myself when I say that. But, but I think you know what I mean. Yeah, it's. It. Leah said it, you know, 10 minutes ago. I think ideally community would be using our individual gifts to work with others, to all use our gifts in service to each other and the whole as an ecological system.

That's exactly like what you're just pointing out. It's not that we all have to take responsibility for everything, but take responsibility for our role and our contribution and our gifts and. Yes. Okay, we are going to take a quick break, so everybody go replenish your drinks, go use the restroom, whatever you need to do. We're gonna just. It'll be about like three minutes okay, so. And then we're gonna cover the.

The four remaining cosmic keys. All right, we'll see you in a second. Amazing. Welcome back, everyone. How are you doing? I want to just check in with everybody. How are you doing? Ah, it's. This is. This is, like, this is for me, so juicy. So, like, in it, like, kind of gritty in a good way. It's like we're just in. We're. We're, you know, addressing the things that are up and real and relevant right now.

So I hope that you are feeling it too. And so Bobby says, magical. Carolyn says, feeling grateful for these conversations. Danny says, so good. Love this community. Teresa, so very helpful. Can't wait to share my thoughts with friends. Yay. Yeah. Share the love. Devaki. Great conversation, Mari. I'm glad I'm not alone. Right? Like, this is. This is such a benefit of coming together in these ways and sharing.

It's like, oh, wow, I'm not the only one thinking about these things. I'm not the only one wondering about these things. I'm not the only one concerned about these things. You know, this arpan is loving this. Leia. Feeling hopeful and connected. Thank you all so much. Wonderful. Okay, Morris, I love your comment. I can't read it right now, but I will. And T of burning to row. Glad to have many perspectives from panelists and commenters too.

Exactly. So I'm going to keep reading as many of the comments as I can, especially for our friends who are going to be tuning into the recording. So. And I love. I love weaving your thoughts and your ideas and your questions into this conversation. So again, this is a conversation. This is a community conversation. We're letting the stars and the wisdom of the cosmos inform the structure of the conversation that we're having.

Brett, I love what you just shared about Capricorn to Aquarius, that when the rules of the game are good, Aquarius is able to innovate. And I also read that a little bit as when the rules of the game make us feel safe and held, Aquarius is free to innovate. And I think that that's hopefully what you're feeling here. We're going into some territory that might feel like a little like, ooh, I don't know, is that safe?

Do I feel good here? And hopefully you do feel safe and good. The other thing someone else was saying is, I loved it. I can't remember who said it. I. The person said, I pay more attention to the frequency or the energy behind which the person is sharing so that I Don't need to agree with them. But if they're coming from love, if they're coming from, from that place, I don't need to agree.

I can just hear them, I can receive them, I can, you know, be with them in that place. Okay. And if they can't, if they aren't totally coming from love, can we love them enough so that maybe like Brett was talking about the patriarchy as the sobbing wounded boy, you know, and thinking about your 9 month old. Can we love them through that process? Can we love them when they're in that place?

You know, okay, we're going to go to the next cosmic key, which is sovereignty. So we have talked about this a little bit, but this was more about recognizing that our nervous systems right now are somewhat vulnerable, that there is information overload, that there is so much change happening so fast and so being sovereign enough to be able to protect your own energy, to be able to protect your, to be that safe container for yourself.

And if we're talking about Capricorn creating structure in which we feel safe, can we create that kind of structure for ourselves? And so I'd love to kick this off, Natasha, with some of this idea around information hygiene, our nervous systems being sort of exposed, being discerning about the information that we're consuming. Can you speak to this as it relates to the idea of sovereignty? But you're muted. There we go.

This is almost the follow up on what Ari Moshe was talking about. Information overload. All kinds of different opinions coming at us. Misinformation, disinformation, malinformation, how much of it can I consume? How much should I consume? Should I believe? Not to believe. We're all like exposed to those waves right now. And so the paradox of what is opening up for us energetically is on one hand, keeping an open mind will be the key for navigating the beauty and the magic and all the wonders that are going to open up to us in the upcoming times.

It's one on one hand, on the other hand, the discernment of what we consumed is at the same time greatly needed. So we have like this paradox. Yes, we need to keep an open mind, but we need to be really fine tuned to the inner again, intuition and voice to know what leads are, let's say, counterproductive for us to take in and integrate. So on one hand, super curiosity, on one hand, this famous saying, who was it, Frank Zappa?

The mind is like a parachute. It is, it doesn't work if it's not open. That's pretty much the logo of the times to come. And on the other hand the subtlety and finesse of the nervous system which is going to thin even more out with Uranus in Gemini, with so much air, with a fire, the. The frequency is so much accelerated and the information is so much more tightly packed.

As somebody mentioned I think Neura that our physical bodies might not even be catching up with the field that we're entering. So that's where the information hygiene is coming. That's where the wisdom and the savviness like being street smart of feeling and tuning in. I'm reading this, this thread or I'm reading this info. How does it make me feel all of a sudden? I feel contraction inside, right?

Or I feel, I feel nausea or I feel afterwards. So that's the key for you. That's the sign create a boundary. You know. On the other hand the information which is uplifting or the information which opens further your the inquiry for you and leads down the path of greater knowledge, greater awareness, follow that path. So we're going to be playing with the amount and the quality of information.

We will be choosing how to consume and it not to be in illusion. We're going to be bombarded. You know, we. It's like everything is being set up in place to basically use the information field right now collectively as means of further control and further manipulation. On the shadow side of it with a Pluto in Aquarius, you're always in Gemini. Like all the technology, you know, all the devices, all the ways to affect and impact our psyche, our subconscious, all the programming that is already in the field, you know, all the technologies of programming the collective conscious and unconscious are in place.

So it's gonna. What's the word? It's gonna be magnified and it's gonna be put to full use. Let's not be naive about that. So that's where our sevenness is coming in. That's where intuition will be coming in. That's where the response of our nervous system and checking and gauging that will be coming in. So we're gonna be mastering our own ability to pick and choose the, the that force that is coming at us.

I'll just offer a brief note. We're not aware of how fractured and traumatized we are by the ocean we're swimming in. And so how common it is to live in a somewhat dissociative mental space. Right. And so just to, to further honor what you were just speaking to Natasha, it requires so much discernment and agency and a Real active choice to want to be a healthy person right now more than just discerning what we're consuming and like more than just mental hygiene.

I went to a bone doctor yesterday because I'm typing on computers that are not made to care for the body, on phones that are not good for the hand. Right? Like it's just not good for you. They get bigger and bigger and bigger and they're just actually really bad for you. And we haven't yet even realized the long term effects because this is all pretty new and it's, it's, it's radical what I personally need to begin changing in my life because it, it counters a status quo of how we live and communicate and relate and work and do business.

And so I think there's also an evolution by necessity of coming back into the body, learning how to reconnect our own personal evolution in a way that actually cares for this container because that's something that we've, without even realizing it, have begun to deeply neglect. I'm sorry. Go ahead, Kaylin, please. Thank you. Because it's been mentioned a few times this idea of frequency and we are all vibrating at a certain level, physically, mentally, emotionally, spiritually.

We all have a specific vibration. And when we're taking care of ourselves physically, mentally, emotionally and spiritually, we up level that vibration. And of course my, my passion lately is being superconductors of love because, because that high, high frequency and we can cultivate that through practices and like we can have a more. I have a morning practice where I offer, you know, I ask for love, guidance, support and protection.

I ask for being supported in letting go of the things that aren't helpful to me and, and then energizing the things that are. And I proclaim myself as a superconductor of love. So this is the kind of thing that we can do to help ourselves to create greater sovereignty. And one of the things, I started doing this process a few years ago because there was a situation in my life where I knew a person was not sending me good energy.

And I didn't want to like had been taught in the past to send it back because that's not helpful. And I, so I just started thinking about some of the different things I had learned and how the super connected field will either take that energy and uplift it or just let it bypass the field. And so these are things that we can do to help create. So we want to, we want to have a strong field within ourselves.

If we have a high vibrational field, we're coming from love. We're coming from kindness, generosity, caring. We can create magic and miracles. We can do all these things when we're vibrating with this energy and focusing on it and giving ourselves permission to do that for just a few minutes. Just waking up or going to sleep or both. Whatever works for you or sometime during the day, if you think about it.

And these are the things that I have found have helped me immensely. So I hope it helps others who are listening to this too. I want to emphasize the difference between sovereignty and protection. So boundaried, grounded. All of these things, of course, very important. And sometimes we go into places and we want to be careful since we're all opening to our empathy and intuition is expanding to like, be us.

And you know. But I had a friend at one point years ago when I was all black tourmaline and like tobacco cloud to keep my, like, bubble, just say, like, oh, have you tried love? And she just asked me to work with a rose quartz heart instead of tourmaline for like a week. And so I love what Kaylin just shared. Like, not only like beaming love, but also know that when you're in love, you know, when you're in that state, which is choice, right.

Then we don't have to worry so much about contamination. And that's a different type of sovereignty. I also just want to honor t, who in the chat has been saying Virgo, Virgo, Virgo a thousand times. Because of course, Virgo is the other side of the, of the axis with Pisces. And it comes in in a few ways. For one, you know, once Uranus leaves Taurus, we have a kind of earthless thing happening, elementally speaking.

And that's always a reminder, oh, to like, go and make sure you're very intentionally doing that. We had so much Capricorn. We've had Uranus and Taurus. We've had like really strong Earth from slow moving planets. And now we're kind of Earthless. And so that reminder to go to the body, to go to the practices, to remember that matter matters, all of those things, right? And then another piece of this is as Uranus now comes into Gemini and eventually will finally perfect a trine with Pluto, right?

There were seven squares between 2012 and 2015. We go back to the seed right in the mid-60s in the sign of Virgo, which really, you know, Virgo, for me, it has an independence. It really has that sovereignty because it, it knows that it stands strong unto itself as long as it has its connection with spirit. And in our I should say for us, you know, in our own way, the way that we practice, the way that we pray, whatever you want to call it, you know, and so like staying sourced in that place, it's likely really important as there's all this fire and waves and you know, in the, in the water waves and the airwaves on, on overload.

Okay. If you are interested in. We had Kaylin on the podcast last week. She was talking about the superconductor field. She was talking about the electrons. She was talking about. It goes to exactly what you just said, Brett, with the rose quartz, that it's actually even more protective to, to carry a different frequency or vibrational field. It's actually more protective for you in terms of if you're trying to, you know, keep certain energies out, that's less protective than actually just holding that frequency of love.

And so anyways, Kaelyn went into the research behind that and it's really fascinating. So if you haven't caught that podcast episode, I highly encourage you to check it out. Okay, let's go to the fifth cosmic key, which is around action or bringing our dreams into reality. I've heard many of you astrologers speak about how things that didn't seem possible before are now possible in ways that they weren't before.

So places where we might have struggled to bring dreams into reality, to actually manifest the things that we know were here to do be an experience where that just felt like obstacles, you know, not enough resources, not enough whatever. Those kinds of things are opening up and becoming more available to us. So can we speak to the astrology first as to why that might be the case and then open up the discussion around it.

And Natasha, do you want to kick this one off? Yes, sure. So we are talking about manifestation, right? Yeah, like the actual bringing things into form. Well, paradoxically, we're leaving the Earth as Gemini said, we're leaving the Taurus and Pluto just left Capricorn. And yet at the same time, because of the heightening and accelerating frequency moving in instead, our interface with the so called reality is also heightened and accelerated.

So in a way we're moving in a more of a mental realm, which means that the distance between the thought and manifestation might be shortening. And it's. A lot of people are actually already experiencing that. I hear reports with Pluto, Pluto going into Aquarius. People are reporting to me, wow, I feel so much lighter. Things are moving on and of course it's going to depend on your personal constitution, on the elemental kind of a distribution.

But nevertheless, so this is going to increase that connection between your thought, your intent and its display through the physical reality. So use, use that, you know, practice the intention setting, practice the setting of your frequency visualization, imagining things already manifested. How does it feel? All these tricks, you know, that are being used in different modalities. That is going to be very helpful. But for that we really need to be pretty, pretty clear.

Despite the confusion we're in. It's like there's. There is so many paradoxes, you know. Well, I give you example from living on big island of Hawaii next to volcano, which several of you have experienced. You know, there is a different kind of electromagnetic field, obviously living next to this open earth with all the erupting energy and the fire is just very intense. So everything is intensified there. So I noticed arriving there, how, how my thoughts were involuntarily turning into reality quicker than they do on the mainland or another continent.

You know, it still happens, we still manifest, of course, we are still projecting the thoughts onto reality. But there, everything just like tighten up and quickened. So then I realized, oh my God, we have to be really careful what we're wishing for because a lot of stuff did come true which ended up not being to the benefit of a lot of people. So moving into this thinner, it's kind of like it's less dense, it's going to be less dense, it's going to be thinner, not as thick, not as much resistance from matter, so to speak.

So we. It's good to have certain amount of clarity despite all of the unknowing and all of the confusion. You know, it's both having clean intention, but at the same time be open to different outcomes. You know, dancing that game. But definitely stepping more in, more actively into the dance with the universe is, I think is a very good time for that. Can you tell I'm ruminating on so many things?

Yes. So this is a big one that I'm always thinking about because we want to make it practically applicable to our lives when we're learning about these things. And a lot of times I think the first step to that practical application is self awareness, self knowledge, really trying to understand why, why is something important for us to, to take action on or to create. And my biggest thing is tuning into aliveness, you know, especially if you feel already like you're in a inequality of strain or struggle or like your life is a big knot.

Like sometimes that can feel really paralyzing. It's like, oh, the economic situation is really hard, or I want to change my job. But it's. I can't because of these qualities and conditions or, you know, somebody in my family is ill and I can't move to that other place that maybe would be my dream because I need to take care of them or got all these obligations, responsibilities. So it's like all of that, you know, I think Saturn with the north node is going to continue us having to deal with those things.

But I'm a fan of doing what is the most energizing first, or this is where we get to use strategy. It's like what unties most of the knots at once. And I think sometimes we get kind of caught up and actually further stretched because it's like we can imagine this web and there's like multiple different intersection knots, difficulties that we're trying to work through. But we're like going from one to the other rather than trying to find what might be at the center.

And I think that's where the inner work comes in. It's like. Like really pulling down and in into the center and feeling into what, what. At the very least, maybe I'm starting with relief. What is the action that brings relief so that I can even get to a place of comfort, so I can even get to a place of play, so I can even get to a place of freedom.

Like, we kind of have to meet ourselves where we are and then go from there, rather than feeling like we have to know all the steps before we even get started. I love that. I want to follow up on that because I often share when people are in Neptune cycles, that it may be that in your life there was a mountain, there was a goal, there was a place you knew you were going.

And then Neptune comes along and a fog rolls in and you can't see the mountain anymore, so you don't know where you're going. And maybe you had a map and you even had a trail and you had signs that pointed to it and none of that's there. So now you have to follow your inner knowing and trust that inner knowing and that. And then I think Neptune is here to help us to get to that in a better way.

Into a. You know, it's like I. I've shared this with people and, and said. And then the thing is, don't talk yourself out of what you know because it doesn't make logical sense. Because Neptune is not logical, rational. And it's not going to say, do A plus B plus C and then you'll get to wherever it is you're going A lot of times it doesn't make any sense at all.

So ideally, then take the step that's in front of you, and then when you take that step, the next step lights up and then you take that step and then the next step lights up. And it doesn't always necessarily work that way. And it may be that you wind up at a completely different mountain that is even more amazing than what you thought you were headed towards. So, but it's again, following that intuition.

And I will say, I'll just quickly say, I, I, I said this to my daughter some years ago and she was thinking about, she was, she had just, her job had ended because this workout studio that she was working for closed. And, and she was thinking about contacting a friend of hers about a place she could go and work that she thought would be really fun. And she woke up thinking about that.

And then she thought, oh, they're never hiring. They all, you know, everybody lives working there and nobody's, they're never hiring. And then she remembered our conversation. So she texted her and she got a text right back saying, we're interviewing today, can you come in at 2? She went in and interviewed and got the job. So it's like it didn't make logical, rational sense. And she was in a Neptune cycle at the time.

And that's why I had been telling her that. So this is something for us to keep in mind. And if it doesn't necessarily make logical sense, don't talk yourself out of it. Take that step and see if it works out for you. And if it doesn't, there'll be another step that lights up. Yeah, just want to share that. Any other astrological significators to help us see that right now is a time or right now or I'm not saying like right today, I'm saying within this next couple years time frame is the time where bringing our dreams into reality is becoming more possible than it might have felt before.

I'll share just briefly. The biggest significator of that to me would be that Saturn, Neptune. Because Saturn, anyway, in any place, no matter what's happening with Saturn is effort, is discipline. It's hard work. So we have to then really ask that question. What kind of discipline and hard work is required when Saturn is joining with Neptune at that. And I love the way you describe that Aries point Gemini.

You know, it's like, it's, it's the ascendant of the Earth. It's such a powerful initiatory energy. But I think that's where we're really learning to Saturn, strengthen our co creative agency to work to allow our dreams and our greater possibilities. Like what our heart tells us is true. And as Caitlin was beautifully saying, doesn't make sense. It's not logical because love isn't logical. Like we didn't create ourselves.

Like we don't know, we don't know how vast and big we are in life is. So it's strengthening our faith, strengthening our co creative agency to work together with the Source to bring forward what we know, know, know deep inside it to be true. I think that's that goes hand in hand with the confusion and the disillusionment. But really this is the, this is the medicine that's the healing on the other end of that that we actually have the potential to strengthen our relationship to Source and you know, follow these teachings of what does it mean to become a superconductor of love?

Like what does it mean to cultivate faith and trust and peace in the face of difficult. What is it? I love what you're saying, Nora around, you know, just focusing on a certain, I forgot the word like relaxation or joy or ease or simplicity so that I can have more fun. Little things like that are ways that we train ourselves to be habits Saturn that we ingrain. Whereas otherwise we would fall into stress or fear or doubt or confusion or anger.

We train ourselves to practice these vibrations. It's so important right now. Okay. All right. Oh yeah, go ahead Natasha. No, I just wanted to add briefly that sometimes action is actually lack of action or as with Saturn, sometimes acting means stopping, repeating the same thing over and over again. So you know, with Saturn, in Aries, with Neptune, we can actually drop a lot of kind of a default modes that we were running on before, you know, or stop.

That action is also an action, you know, non doing becomes the doing itself which opens the whole new spaces for self actualization that we at this point might not even imagine yet. Are you all feeling that? I've been feeling that what you just spoke to Natasha, like some of the repeating patterns, some of the repeating, you know, places where I might get stuck have been easier to actually move beyond recently.

And I've just, I just wanted to get a pulse and see if other people are experiencing that too. Like places where you used to get stuck over and over, you're finding, okay, wow, I can like see that pattern. It's easier for me to kind of step out of it and move into something different. Yes. Seems so easy suddenly Momo. Yes, yes, very true. And Myra is noticing It.

Yeah. Okay. Yes. Easier to be the observer. There you go, Jenny. Exactly. And more self awareness, says Lana. Yeah. Okay. All right. So the last two keys are. And we're going to just speak to. But we're going to kind of blend these. Okay. Because we've been speaking to them throughout. But the, the sixth one is compassion. And this is mainly self compassion, self love, and then also intention.

So in terms of intention, recognizing these threshold moments and walking through them with intentionality, with as much awareness as possible. So can we speak to both the astrology and the, you know, how to actually do these things, how to hold intention, how to hold self. Compassion, compassion. If you all have anything you want to offer on this, I'll just say something about. Because Venus went retrograde in Aries, is coming back into Pisces, going back into Aries.

Of course, Mercury is also doing the same thing. And so we have this, not only with Neptune and Saturn, this Aries, Pisces dance. We've got it going on with Venus and Mercury as well. And looking at the Venus cycle, this is a very rare happening that's taking place. And in fact, just saw something from starwalk about how Venus is going to be visible in the evening sky from the 18th to the 21st, in the morning sky from the 18th to the 21rd.

I mean, I knew, I knew about the. Like, it could be visible on the 23rd in the morning sky and visible in the evening sky. And then they're making that quick shift, but it's like they were showing like star, the. The Venus as it's setting and Venus as it's rising. And that's because of the. How it's a steep rise in the. In the morning sky and it's a.

Or no, it's a steep set in the evening sky and it's an angular rise in the morning sky. I. I don't know if I completely tracked all that exactly. But anyway, so what's happening is this, this Aries, Pisces dance. And many people look at the Venus cycle starting with, with the sun conjunction. Venus conjunct The sun on March 22. And so that Venus cycle would then be an Aries cycle.

But the ancient cultures, the Sumerians and Babylonians, started the Venus cycle when they could see her in the morning sky. That would be for sure, March 29th in Pisces. But she might be visible in the morning sky for some people on the 23rd. So then it would. So anyway, we've been looking at this Pisces, Aries blending also inspired by the fact that Saturn and Neptune are doing this Pisces Aries dance.

And so looking at the compassion of Pisces and the action of Aries and that fierce compassion, like taking it and blending them together and, and really feeling into how we are at a time. I have never seen anything like this. I, I mean, 165 years since Neptune went into Aries and back. And then when it did that, it didn't do it three times, it only did it once.

It just went into Aries and stayed there. Same with Saturn. The last time it went into Aries, it just stayed there. It didn't go back and forth like it's doing. And then of course, thousands of years since they've come together at the 0 Aries point, which is happening in February of 2026. And so it's just so our, our opportunity now to. I think because one of the ways Aries operates is it greatest desires to have a mission and a purpose, and it likes to have a mission that's about restoring cosmic justice.

How are we restoring things so it's safe for people to be who they are. And then of course, Pisces is all about the love and compassion. So you put these two together and it's really about how are we creating a way especially for the divine feminine to express in these. You know, she's fierce, she's committed, she wants to take the action. She's going to do what it takes.

The last time we had Venus in aries back in 2017 cycle was when more women ran for office than ever before and got elected back in 2018. It was still in that cycle, but it was, you know, it was just, it's like the, the desire to step up and make. Take action. We also had the movie Wonder Woman come out right as that cycle was starting. And so very, very much Aries kind of energy.

But now we're adding in this Pisces piece as well. So there's. So it's compassionate action. That's take that we're. That's possible. And so, and then again, if we're activating ourselves as superconductors of love, then we're taking the Aries Pisces piece together and, and showing up with this vibrational field. And if there's enough of us who do that, and I shared this in the video that Amanda mentioned earlier, is that 1%, it's the square root of 1%.

So if you have a million people, 1% is 100,000 people. And the square root of that is 100 people. So we just need a small number of people who are willing to really cultivate this love energy and to, to radiate this love energy and to really change the whole entire world. And it could happen in the blink of an eye. I love that. I was just looking at Princess Leia.

Star wars. The first Star wars came out with a Venus Aries cycle as well. And there's a lot of really fun signs around the neighborhood now that a woman's place is in the Resistance or in the Rebellion might be an appropriate Star wars way to say that. And it's interesting. Just look eight years ago, what was happening in this country and what's happening now. So these Aries Venus cycles with an archetype I found my way to a while back.

At first I thought it was a joke, but now it feels it's so fitting as Shira and I'm really dating myself. But that's the sister of he man which came out during Aries Venus cycle. But the Venus star and Caitlin's done so much to help us learn about this. It slowly retrogrades through the zodiac and so that shift kind of backwards from what we're used to from Aries to Pisces.

And she raised this warrior goddess with like a five pointed star hilted sword. But she has healing hands and she rides a Pegasus unicorn called Swifty. And by the way, like where the Aries point is in the stars now it's at the, it's at the Pegasus and it's at this kind of like it's preparing to move from the fish to the water bearer, which is one of the images for the dawning of the age of Aquarius.

That gets kind of tricky to do the astronomy there. And it's too long of a tale to tell right now. But you know, twice in our lives Venus, when conjoining the sun actually passed visibly in front of the Sun. That happens in Gemini or in Sagittarius and It happened in 2004 and 2012. This Venus conjunction now is the furthest thing from a transit. Venus is 8 and a half degrees away from the sun when conjunct the sun.

Right. Because latitude also matters. And that's why actually there will be, I believe the opportunity far north of the equator for folks in Canada to see Venus as an evening star during the sun conjunction. While people in Russia are seeing in that same moment Venus as a morning star. And it's very Aries in this way of like taking no time at all to transform. And it's also very Pisces to be both, right?

Because there will be if you're far north of the equator and clouds allow and horizons allow you literally to have the opportunity, as Kayla was saying, to see Venus as a morning star and as an evening star the same day and maybe even for a few days. And that's kind of like a confusing thing, but it's a good confusion. It's like, well, be careful with these rigid rules, as we've been saying now, right?

Like, loosen up, open your mind, open your heart, allow yourself to dream. Maybe things don't work as it seems to on some chart which is a model of the world. You know, Aries, it's fun too. At equinox time, East Quinox, I call it again, because 0 Aries is east of the center of the Earth. It's the fastest sunrise, but the slowest sunset. Or if you're in the southern hemisphere, the opposite is true, right?

And I really feel this, somebody wrote in the chat, like, one thing's for sure, it's all happening so fast. It is. And there's this kind of awakening thing and we need to be careful with like the beep, beep of the alarm clock, you know, and we also need to be careful hitting snooze. But I think we, we need to be really careful of thinking that if it doesn't happen right now, then we missed our opportunity because as we, we've seen, right, planets coming into Aries, going back into Pisces, the Venus star moving retrograde, the Mercury star moving retrograde, Mercury's retrograde in Aries back to water signs and then next year in the water, water signs, right?

So in Aries, this year in Pisces and that image of Pisces to Aries being the opportunity, I think more perhaps than anything else of bringing the vision into action, right? Like being a visionary, right? Vision. Aries is kind of that cusp, but also to remember, like while the dream can manifest and maybe with you know, more rapidity than typical or like maybe we're all in, in that magical space of Hawaii and we should be careful, like, you know, what we're dreaming into in some ways.

But we really need to be careful with this idea that our dreams cannot come true because we're used to that, right? Or we, we were taught that that magical thought is silly, nonsense, childish, whatever. Can we take back our true right, maybe even responsibility as incarnated souls to wake up in this dream and to in that becoming lucid, choose how we want to dream in a better world.

And you know, what is that? Vision for a better place. So the lunar nodes, of course, they also travel retrograde. I was just speaking about this with Amanda on the Astrology Hub podcast about the 18.6 year nodal cycle. And that retrogradation, like the retrogradation of the Venus star, of the Mercury star, they offer shorter periods, 18.6 year being the shortest of these, to help us open to our collective kind of species memory of the long cycle, the 26,000 year cycle, the precession of the equinox, as we often call it.

But it's also the precession of the solstices. And where the solstices are now, that's the biggest show in town because only every 26,000 years, ish do they align. Does the spine of Gaia, the sword of our stone, the world tree, our rotational axis, does it align to the Milky Way? Anyway, and it's like that now, and it's centered around 1998, but like the window is wide open. And so as the north node now comes from Aries to Pisces, which happened on 1-11-25, we have what are called lunar maximums in the great lunar standstill cycle.

And I encourage you, if you want to learn more about that, go watch this podcast episode that I recorded with Amanda, I think last week, because we looked at some of the climate effects of this and we're talking about like measurable sea levels, surface temperatures, tidal extremes, El Nino, mosquito blooms, right? But it's a, it's like maximum tides. And so I think one of the most important things about astrology is to try to avoid like the fear trap that astrology can be and definitely go with the intention.

Aligning myself with the energies and the dream and also just know, yeah, it's meant to be pretty tidal and up and down and crazy right now. And we're meant to be in it and you're weathering it. So put your hand on your heart and remind yourself that you're growing through it all. We grow through what we go through. And love yourself for it and love all the souls who are also in this turbulent thing, whether they know it or not.

So let me just say one thing. Astronomically, the moon every 18.6 years will align monthly for a short period of time right between us and the center of the Milky Way. And it's like that forever. But it's only for like a few hundred years where that happens during this galactic alignment, during the solstice, alignment with the galaxy, like literally, we are experiencing something that only happens every 26,000 years.

And I'm sure every incarnated astronomer who honors that, there's also energetic contributions from the heavens, wants their time to be the most special astronomical time. But it's now, it's just, it's undeniable. And the more I look in, the more I learn, the, the more amazed I am about. Wow. Like we are living in this time that's long been prophesied in many beautiful poetic ways. And it's important for us to remember that of course this opportunity for change and we're talking about like a complete changing of the ages, all stories being rewritten.

It will require a birthing process and some labor pain and to like love ourselves through that. And the weirder the world gets and the more conscious you become of that that you just unders like being in it, right? And then there is this individuated ability to navigate, to steer, to choose where you're going. And simply in the choice, you know, the destiny becomes available. Feel that everyone. Just feel what Brett just said about the uniqueness of this moment.

That you are alive in that you are here for that you are contributing to. Just feel it. So as everyone has said, if you're feeling like it's a lot, if you're feeling like it is and you're here and you're choosing, you're actively learning about it, you're actively engaging with it by being here on this two hour and seven minute event, you are choosing to engage with it. And so I hope that you have received things here in our time together that you can use to continue to inform and anchor in and decide and choose how you're going to dance with these waves, how you're going to surf these waves, how you're going to meet this time, this potent moment in time.

It'll, it'll never happen again. This is it. This is our moment. This is so cool. This is just amazing, really. I mean I just hope that you can feel how just unique and rare and precious it is and how unique and rare and precious you are. So thank you for being here, for being on this journey with us, for being on this ride with us. I want to offer Nura and Ari one more chance to say anything else they want to say.

But I also am aware that we're like eight minutes over and I'm very aware that it's very late for my mission. Natasha Alter. So my day is just getting started. You're good? Okay. All right, so just any like final closing, you know, just help us anchor in this like the Amazingness of this. You know, I think something that really ties together the Pisces Aries qualities that we've been talking to is the quality of rebirth and innocence.

You know, we come into this world and perhaps we have lived, I believe we've lived many lives before, but we're still always coming with a blank slate. But it's something that we get to choose again every day as well. And that quality of innocence can really help us, I think, be able to face and navigate the changes from a place of that inner alignment. And something I just wanted to offer everyone, especially if, if that is difficult.

Our minds respond better to questions often than statements, right? If we, if we say something like I am innocent, well, maybe our mind is going to want to argue with that and, and say, oh, look at all the ways you're not, right? Especially if you've got some feist, if you've got some strong Aries, maybe, or Virgo. All of us, we can all argue with ourselves, right? But instead if you ask it from the question of how am I innocent or what is my innocence?

Want me to remember right now? Now we use our minds, our beautiful minds to go and hunt for those answers. And so I think that's a beautiful way to just remind us, you know, whatever it is, whether we're struggling with abundance, you know, how am I abundant right now? We're struggling with loneliness, how am I connected right now? Or what are the connections available to me? It just helps us to go looking for exactly what we need from that inner space of alignment.

And I think it reminds us of our capacity to resource. I love that. Thank you so much. Good questions. I just have to add to that, since you started, courage, what would courage express as through me right now? Courage, bravery, leadership. Okay, you guys, Anyone else? Natasha, do you want to add any final thoughts? I feel like we had Kaylin and Brett and then. Oh, but, but you're muted.

That's very Neptunian. I just want to play a little bit with the, with the Mercury, Venus going, being in Aries and then going back to Pisces for a little while and sitting there together with Neptune and Saturn. That's almost like, yeah, we're moving on into some new, unknown, fascinating, exciting, maybe adventurous, new fresh reality. But then we, we just need to come back just to remind ourselves of the timeless values of the eternal values, the values that are not transient, that are not dependent on the, on the temporary transits of these planetary bodies, you know, or those alignments, you know, it's like that Deep back into, into Pisces brings us a reminder that before we go on, let's just remember and anchor ourselves to the source, to the infinite, abundant, timeless womb that we're all in and try to remind ourselves about that place while we are adventuring into the new paradigm and of course, bringing compassion with us.

Because, you know, if we are stepping into this new Aries zones, we are like, you know, we're going to be like kids. We are like kids starting some new experiments, new. Experimenting with new. New reality, new frequencies, new constructs, you know, new paradigms to explore. So being gentle on ourselves, being kind on ourselves, seeing ourselves as children, just like Brett mentioned this part, seeing patriarchy like this angry, unloved kid, seeing ourselves, we're all children, as human, you know, trying to figure it out while here, how to navigate this very complex, contradictory, you know, polarized reality.

So being gentle, being compassionate, being forgiving, to treating ourselves as those little kids, it doesn't mean not to take responsibility. But being humble, that's also sad. Being humble in the quest that we are pursuing. Thank you. One more thing, Amanda. There's been some really wonderful chat here about courage and bravery. And I was contemplating those words and started studying the difference between them and really felt courage in Leo and bravery in Aries.

Because the difference that I appreciated that came to me was that courage is acting bravely in the face of fear and bravery is just acting. So there's even. There's no recognition of fear. It's before fear, right? It's before an emotional response. And we have that opportunity to just act and poetry and Pisces and Natasha, what I just heard you say just reminded me of On Children by Khalil Gilbron, which I read regularly and read to parents often in client sessions.

And I really recommend everybody tune into that really powerful poem and hear yourself as the parent and hear yourself as the child and hear yourself as the. As the archer's hand. If you go read that book or that poem on children by Khalil Gilbron from the Prophet, you'll know what I mean by all of that. Thank you. Thank you, thank you. Thank you so much. I mean, people are saying in the chat, Chris is giving a standing ovation.

You are all such amazing humans. Thank you so much everyone here. We all rock. I love that. I love. We all rock. Deep bows to all of you and all of us kids at play. Thank you for sharing your knowledge and wisdom. Thank you all. This has been wonderful. Sending love, childlike innocence, curiosity and fearlessness. Love this so much. Anchor to earth, lie in the grass and listen there too.

I'm feeling an overwhelming amount of love. So let's take this way, this feels and continue to proliferate it both for ourselves and for the people around us. If you want support with that, we're doing this all the time in the inner circle. We would love, love, love to have you. This is a great time to jump in. If you're interested, go check it out. Astrologyhub.com joinnow I am gonna stay and answer questions.

If any of you have questions about the inner circle, I'm happy to stay as long as we want to hang out. I do want to excuse our incredible panelists. Thank you. Just thank you for bringing your light, bringing your wisdom, bringing it through your unique lens. Thanks to all of you for contributing to the entire co creation in the chat. Your questions, your comments, your energy, even if you didn't chat, just the fact that you're here, we can feel you.

We can feel you in this community. So thank you for all of that and let's, let's do it. Seize this moment. Seize it with all of this beautiful wisdom and with our beautiful hearts and these, these instructions that are within us that we just need to listen to. They're going to continue blossoming and unfolding and we can trust that and we can enjoy it. Can just enjoy this process of being like Noora said, alive, aliveness.

All right, thanks to all of you for being here. Thank you for being our community. We'll catch you on the next panel, on the next podcast maybe in the inner circle. Love to you all and take care.
